Coffee run for Athletics baseball rookies

CHICAGO – The tradition of visiting teams at Wrigley Field sending players on a pregame coffee run has been in place for over a decade now. On Wednesday, it was time for the Athletics of Sacramento to partake.

Organized by clubhouse elder statesman Jeff McNeil, seven players dressed in full uniform about four hours before a 7:05 game against the Cubs were sent to the Starbucks down the street to pick up an order of about 27

coffees, placed by the A's second baseman, for the team and coaching staff.

Per tradition rules, players with limited Major League service time are required to make the trek.

For the A's, those seven were (pictured) Kade Morris (who was called up on June 2), Gage Jump (who made his second career start and earned his first win on the same day), Henry Bolte, Mason Barnett, Jack Perkins, Colby Thomas and Carlos Cortes.

America's 250th anniversary

America's 250th anniversary is a milestone of resilience and reinvention. As the nation celebrates its Semiquincentennial, it reflects on a journey shaped by diverse voices, from the framers of 1776 to modern trailblazers. It is a living story written by millions of Americans.

The narrative of the United States spans two and a half centuries of growth, struggle, and unyielding ambition.

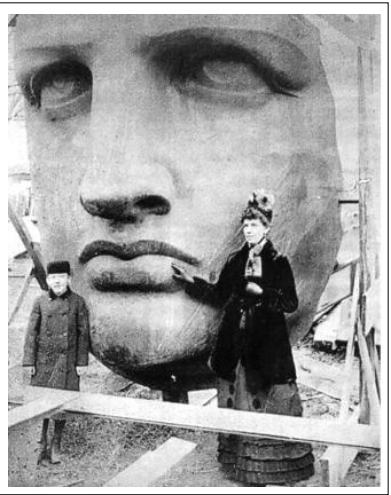

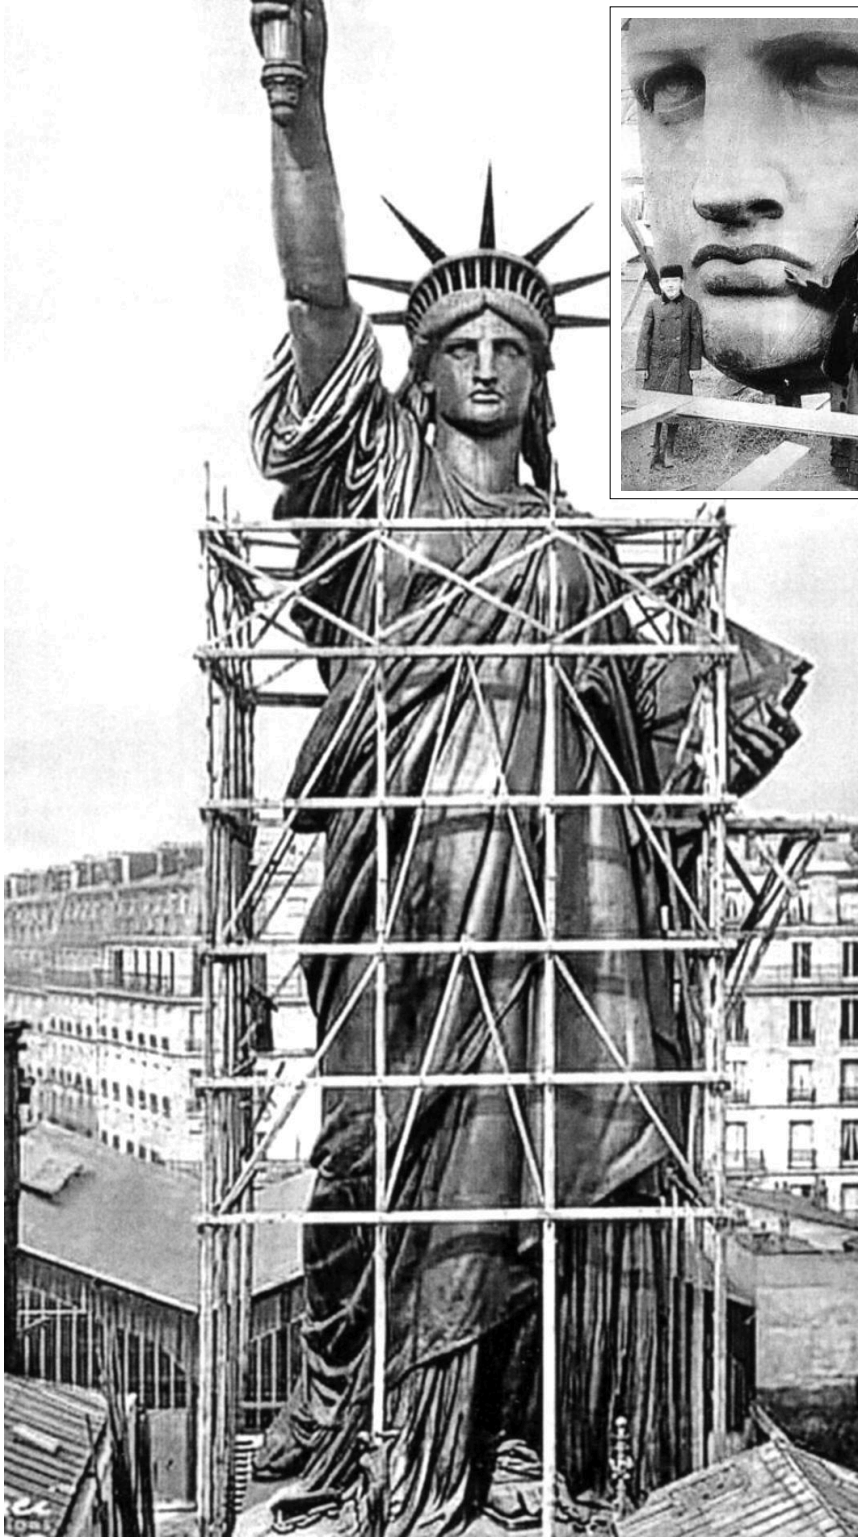

Born from the stroke of a pen on a single sheet of parchment, the country evolved through sweeping industrial innovation, the heartache of a fractured civil war, and the triumphant marches of civil rights. It is a collective effort to form a "more perfect union," driven by everyday citizens whose individual contributions weave together into a much larger national tapestry.

As communities across the country celebrate the Semiquincentennial, this moment in time is about much more than fireworks and pageantry. Official efforts, such as the Freedom 250 initiative, have focused on honoring the legacy of the past while looking firmly toward future exploration and unity.

The celebration invites local participation—from preserving intergenerational family memories for the Library of Congress through programs like America 250.

Our American Story to sharing personal reflections nationwide.

Ultimately, America's 250th anniversary honors an ongoing experiment. Out of many, one—the enduring promise of E Pluribus Unum—remains the bedrock of the country's continuing story.

The Statue of Liberty, a gift to the United States from France, was designed by French sculptor Frédéric Auguste Bartholdi, and its metal framework built by Gustave Eiffel. The statue was dedicated on October 28, 1886 in NY Harbor. ABOVE: when it was assembled in Paris.

There is an interesting theme that runs throughout the Bible. It is an W then theme. If we are obedient to God, then we can be confident of His blessings, favor, gifts and a sense of His presence in our lives. If on the other hand, we are disobedient and willingly disobey His laws and teachings
then we will experience guilt
and a separation from Him.

Certainly the feelings of separation can be a good thing. It is God within us stirring up the gift He has given us - the gift of the Holy Spirit who is to guide us and guard us. When we become “disconnected” from God,
He is to “alert us” of impending dangers and convict us to return to the path and plan God has designed for us. He is eager to do His work if we are willing to allow Him to do so.

Our Psalmist reminds us that God speaks peace to His people and to His saints.” His peace is what brings us “wholeness and completeness” and unites us with Him. It dissolves the fear we have of Him and removes the guilt that we carry within us
from being disobedient to Him.

So our Psalmist wisely adds, “but let them not return to their folly” - or perhaps a more appropriate translation of the word “folly” is stupidity.” What might this mean?

Often we become “presumptuous” and assume that we deserve God’s blessings. We take an inventory of our lives and things appear to be “just about as wonderful as wonderful can be.” We have no “fear” of God and take His goodness for granted. “What stupidity!” says
the Psalmist. “Be careful of falling into Your past sinful ways.”

Many of us struggle through difficult times and painful days because of past memories. We recall with pleasure what God has done in the past with gratitude - knowing that it was His mercy and grace that enabled us to get through difficult days and long nights. Because of those joyous memories, we base our hope in Him that He will shepherd us through dark valleys and sunless days.

In Psalm 85 our author is apparently reflecting on a loss suffered by Israel in a military battle. They looked at their loss as punishment from God. But the Psalmist does not focus on the loss, he focuses on the fact that God has brought them out of captivity in the past and forgave them of their sins. With confidence and boldness he says, “Restore us again, O God,
our Savior.”

The message for us to take away from this Psalm is that in times of depression, defeat and darkness we must remember God’s grace in the past and pray
in the present for His restoration.

Sometimes when we look at our past and are buried with the guilt of our sins we are fearful of going to God and asking for His grace in these moments. We feel that we are undeserving and unworthy. We approach His throne of grace in fear and trembling, wondering if we have any right to ask for forgiveness,
cleansing and restoration.

But when these thoughts
plague us, we must remember that God’s judgment is always tempered by His mercy and He will always forgive us, restore us and revive us again.

Big bad guy busted by deputies

San Joaquin County Sheriff Deputies this week in the late afternoon arrested a residential burglary suspect following a vehicle pursuit in Stockton.

Deputies located a vehicle suspected to be connected to a residential burglary that occurred several days ago on Priest Road in Stockton. When deputies attempted a traffic stop, the driver fled.

The pursuit ended near Sierra Nevada Street and Weber Avenue, where the driver surrendered without further incident.

Deputies recovered property believed to have been stolen during the burglary, along with tools commonly used to commit residential burglaries. During the pursuit, the passenger claimed they repeatedly asked the suspect to stop and let them out, but he refused.

Roger Potts, 44, was arrested on charges including kidnapping, residential burglary, possession of stolen property, evading law enforcement, hit-and-run, and outstanding felony warrants.

Outstanding work by our deputies. Protecting our community is our top priority, and we will continue to pursue those who choose to break the law and hold them accountable.

Supes take action on tailpipe thefts

Would-be thieves will face tougher penalties in San Joaquin County for stealing catalytic converters after the Board of Supervisors approved a new ordinance aimed at curbing the costly crime.

“This is a message to anyone who tries to make a quick buck at the expense of hard-working residents,” said District 4 Supervisor Steve Ding, who proposed the ordinance. “Too many people have had their lives disrupted. They can’t get to work or take their kids to school when their catalytic converter is stolen. This ordinance sends a clear message that the consequences will outweigh the reward, and thieves will think twice before targeting our communities.”

Highlights of the catalytic converter ordinance:

- * Classifies catalytic converter theft as a misdemeanor violation punishable by a fine of up to $1,000, up to six months in County Jail, or both.
- * Makes it unlawful to possess a catalytic converter that is not attached to a vehicle unless the individual can provide documentation proving lawful ownership.
- * Directs a portion of collected fines into a fund to assist victims of catalytic converter theft.

‘Gentleman’ poet is a part of California lore

An early Mother Lode “poet” was full of skullduggery. His name was Charles E. Boles, also known as the infamous stage coach robber Black Bart. His last known stage robbery took place at Funk Hill near Copperopolis. He was injured in the attempted heist and left behind a handkerchief, which was traced to Charles Boles’ residence in San Francisco.

Charles E. Boles established the trademark for his 28 hold-ups by wearing a flour sack and wielding a double-barreled shotgun. One of the stage drivers, John Shine, will eventually become a U.S. Marshall and state senator. A newspaper article in the Marysville Appeal attributes the robbery to four bandits. Since Black Bart worked alone, the other “robbers” are probably sticks propped up in a cluster of bushes to simulate shotguns. The southbound stage from Oregon is known to carry goods, food and minimum stash of cash. The northbound stage usually carried lots of cash and California gold to Oregon. Black Bart robbed the southbound stage, causing Wells Fargo agents to believe that this job might be the work of an amateur. The robber left a poem at the scene of the hold up. Black Bart leaves another signed poem after stealing cash and a diamond ring. He removed the name engraved on the inside and wears this “favorite ring” until he is captured. His second poem: “Here I lay me down to sleep to wait the coming morrow. Perhaps success, perhaps defeat and everlasting sorrow. Let come what will, I’ll try it on, my condition can’t be worse. But if there’s money in the box, it’s money in my purse.” What does Black Bart do since his most recent robbery in nearby Berry Creek? There is speculation about a week-end in Orville at the Commercial Hotel and “partying” Saturday night at the Gem Saloon. Further speculation involves a liaison with Mary Volume at the Woodleaf Hotel a few miles from La Porte. During this robbery he reassures a woman passenger: “No, don’t get out. I never bother the passengers.” Bart enjoys a picnic while waiting for the stage. October is sheep shearing season in Mendocino County and this stage transports large sums of money to support the industry. After completing his second robbery in two days, Bart hikes to the McCreary farmhouse near Williams and pays for his dinner. Later, 14-year-old Donna McCreary provides the first accurate description of Black Bart. Nearly nine months have elapsed since his last robbery. Bart comments to the stage driver: “Sure hope you have a lot of gold in that strong box, I am nearly out of money.” This hold up takes place about 10 miles north of Redding in an area which will later become Shasta Lake. All of the loot from this Saturday night withdrawal is taken from U.S. mail pouches. Less than 48 hours later, Black Bart holds up a westbound stage between the towns of Millville and Round

Mountain. Robberies 10 and 11 must have been quite profitable because nine months would elapse before his next job. This robbery occurs at the same time as robbery number four. Wells Fargo does not blame the hold up on Black Bart until his capture. The target of this robbery is the gold being transported from the mining operations near Weaverville and Lewiston (Trinity County). The actual robbery takes place near French Gulch. Several newspapers highlight Bart’s sense of humor by quoting his quip at the end of the robbery. “Hurry up the hounds, it gets lonesome in the mountains.” Bart goes “interstate” by expanding his territory to Southern Oregon. While in Oregon, he completes two jobs, each a week apart. Two fascinating ironies occur: If Bart had delayed robbing this stage for three days, President Rutherford B. Hayes and General William Sherman would have been on board. On October 1, a person who closely matches the description is arrested at Elk Creek Station and is released after being questioned. An attempt to rob the northbound stage results in failure. Bart is scared away by either the sound of the approaching southbound stage or a hatchet held in the hand of the driver, which appears to be a gun. Ten months later, Bart returns to Siskiyou County and robs the southbound Rosenberg to Redding stage. Mail sacks are cut open with two slashes, one down and one across, to form a “T” shape, another Black Bart trademark. Nearly 50 years later, the stage driver, Horace Williams, recalled asking Bart: “How much did you make?” Bart answered, “Not very much for the chances I have to take.” Three days later, about 35 miles southeast, Bart strikes again near Round Mountain. Wells Fargo Detective Hume organizes a posse which loses Bart’s trail near Oroville. As the stage approaches Dobbins, Bart takes the mailbags destined for the Oregon House and Marysville. Again, Bart’s swiftness on foot and knowledge of the surrounding area enable him to evade capture. Bart robs the North San Juan to Marysville stage near the town of Bridgeport. The Grass Valley Union states that the robber did not get anything of value. [This same article blames Black Bart for the recent robbery of the Smartsville Stage. The snow, rain and mud of Northern California normally prevent Bart from robbing stages during the months of January, February and March. This one exception occurs about six miles north of the robbery and follows him as far as Kelseyville, but Bart evades capture. Apparently, he stole enough to cover his living expenses until spring. The only stagecoach passenger this is Hiram Willits, who is the postmaster of Willitsville, California that eventually becomes Willits.

Today, the site of this robbery is highlighted by a landmark called Robber’s Rock near Willits. This stage is so loaded with gold that Wells Fargo assigns their best Messenger, George Hackett, to ride “shotgun”. On this day, Hackett becomes the only Wells Fargo messenger to foil two robbery attempts in one day. Bart could have retired if he had won this high stakes game, which was played out about five miles south of La Port. He is lucky to escape with his life. As Bart approaches the stage, George fires his shotgun. When Bart dives into the brush, George fires the second barrel and blasts the outlaw’s hat. Later the hat is found with several fresh holes and a few strands of gray hair. That same afternoon, the stage is held up in Forbestown in another robbery. Hackett is again victorious and arrives in Oroville late that evening with the entire load. The afternoon robbery is mistakenly blamed on Bart. This robbery is a rerun of robbery number 18. (Same stage, same location and same driver). The haul is barely enough to pay for Bart’s dinner. The Lakeport to Cloverdale road is described as the longest 30 miles in the world. The road is narrow, rocky and twists as it ascends and descends dangerously close to the edge off the mountain. Bart strikes when the stage is eight hours from Lakeport and five miles from Cloverdale. Four and a half months later, Bart stages a repeat of robbery 26. A physical description of the robber and the tactics used unquestionably connect him to this robbery. Mail and express packages from Sutter Creek and other nearby towns are sent to Jackson. The Jackson to Lone stage transports out of the area shipments [to the Amador Branch Railroad. The stage leaves the National Hotel in Jackson on Saturday morning and is robbed about four miles out of Jackson. As the stage approaches Funk Hill, near Copperopolis, passenger Jimmy Roller asks the stage driver to stop. Jimmy wants to hunt a jack rabbit and plans to catch up when the stage is at the top of Funk Hill. Jimmy sees Bart opening the strong box with a crow bar. He fires at the robber. Bart exits the scene so hastily, that he leaves behind a handkerchief with the laundry mark FX07. The laundry mark gives Wells Fargo agents the clue that leads to the capture of Charles E. Boles, alias Black Bart. This site of American folklore is marked by the Black Bart at Fink Hill monument in Copperopolis. Detective Harry Morse discovers that the laundry mark belongs to “Charles E. Boles” who resides at 37 2nd St., in San Francisco, about two blocks from the present day Sheraton Palace Hotel. For more than eight years, Bart had embarrassed Wells Fargo’s finest while operating from a home-base right under their noses, about four blocks from Wells Fargo’s headquarters. A search of the apartment produces considerable incriminating evidence. A Bible is discovered inscribed: “This precious Bible is presented to Charles E. Boles, First Sergeant Company B, 116th Illinois Volunteer Infantry, by his wife. Later, James B. Hume, Wells Fargo Special Officer, confronts Boles about his whereabouts during the first five days of November. After denying all charges, Bart is transported to the Calaveras County seat at San Andreas. Sheriff Benjamin Thorn formally charges Bart. After six hours of intensive questioning, Boles confesses to only the most recent robbery in which there is much evidence of his guilt. To gain good favor with the court, Bart discloses that he has more than $4,000 of loot in a hollow tree stump near the Copperopolis robbery. He pleads guilty and is sentenced to six years at San Quentin. After four and a half years, Bart is released from prison early because of good behavior. He is now in his mid-50’s. Legend says that Wells Fargo paid him a lifetime monthly “restrainer” as an insurance policy against future robberies. There is speculation that Black Bart committed more robberies after his release. Researchers also say that Charles E. Boles was last seen in 1888 at the Palace Hotel in Visalia, California. How this famous outlaw of the early-American West lived the rest of his life is a mystery. The date and place of his death are unknown.

* Increases penalties for repeat offenders.

“This ordinance gives law enforcement another tool to hold offenders accountable while making it harder to profit from stolen catalytic converters,” Ding said. “It also recognizes the real impact these thefts have on working families by helping support victims.” Supervisor Ding partnered with Riverside County resident Daryl Terrell, who has been on a statewide mission to strengthen catalytic converter laws.

“We are making a difference one County and one City at a time,” said Terrell. “I want to thank Supervisor Ding for his passion and for joining me in this effort to protect our communities.”

Catalytic converters are a frequent target for thieves because they contain valuable precious metals and can be removed from a vehicle in as little as one minute. Once stolen, they can be sold for as much as $1,200 each. More than 3,500 stolen catalytic converters have been recovered throughout San Joaquin County, including in Stockton and Lodi.

The ordinance becomes effective 30 days after the adoption by the Board of Supervisors.

Navigating difficult circumstances

Dr. Glenn Mollette
Herald correspondent

Every human being faces everyday challengers. We all have them. No way is immune from problems, sickness and death. Hurdles to jump, mountains to climb and oceans to swim is a part of life. There is always a fire to put out or something to fix. Life is filled with repairs that await our attention.

Maintenance is a daily grind. Property maintenance, car and our physical bodies. You can't ignore either of the three very long without consequences. It's a big job staying on top of all that we need to do.

Sometimes the load becomes heavy. So much to do. This is why some people eventually get tired of too much to do and try to downsize. Sometimes you can and sometimes you can't. If you can then it's fine if you want to. Life has a lot to do with what we want to do. If you enjoy having a lot to do then changing your lifestyle may not be for you. If you would enjoy having less to be concerned about then it sounds like a good move to make.

If we have good health we can do more. If our health is declining then our major priority better be our health. Once our health is gone then we won't be doing anything.

Having blood work done by your local doctor is very important. You should do it every year. If there are some concerns you may want to do it every six months or more. The numbers will tell you if your cholesterol or sugar is too high or if there are other concerns. If you receive a bad report then every day you have to manage what food you are not going to eat and what you will try to eat. This becomes a job because it's not easy to cut out ice cream, cheeseburgers and pizza. Usually, these three are some of the first food groups to become outlawed or at least cut way back in our routine eating.

There are more hurdles in life than our diets. Americans face financial challenges from paying the rent to buying groceries. Credit card rates, interest rates on homes and car make for almost unbearable challenges for millions of Americans.

There is never a simple answer to all the stuff that we face in every day in life. The will of the human spirit is the most critical factor in dealing with life hurdles. When the spirit is down it is easy to be overwhelms. If our spirit is strong we navigate

God will provide a way. He will see you through if you will look to him for guidance. Resist the devil and he will flee from you, the Bible says. He may not go too far away but remember greater is he who is within you than he that is in the world. The strength of God is greater. You may have to make some critical life changes. Change and giving up or starting a new direction is never easy but it may be the way that God is leading you through your difficult circumstances.

Th fire-ball was caught on camera in multiple locations recently. The American Meteor Society received more than 50 reports of sightings from multiple states, with the most reports coming from southern Louisiana.

Fireballs are caused when space debris burns up while reentering the earth's atmosphere. Experts say the particularly bright fireballs typically represent objects that are at least 3 feet in diameter.

Experts are still working to determine whether any pieces of Sunday's apparent meteor made contact with the ground.

A home security camera in Colorado captured the moment a man opened the door of his pickup truck and came face to face with a bear in the passenger seat.

Justin Pickar's Nest camera at his Steamboat Springs home captured video of Andy Kerrigan's bear encounter in front of the house.

The video shows Kerrigan open the passenger door of his truck, revealing a bear inside the vehicle.

Kerrigan, who said the bear apparently climbed in through an open window, ran around to the front of the truck, but the bear did not exit through the open door, instead choosing to continue rooting around inside in an apparent search for food. The man ended up retrieving a wooden plank and using it to intimidate the bear into vacating the vehicle.

The truck did not appear to be seriously damaged by the bruin.

Oh where oh where is my little pet cow?

Traffic on a busy Ontario highway was interrupted when a cow wandered onto the busy road near Aurora, police said.

Ontario Provincial Police said on social media that officers from Aurora were summoned to Highway 400, just north of 6th Line, on a report of a cow in the roadway on Thursday. "If you're northbound on #Hwy400 near 4th Line, slow down and moooove over," police wrote. "There's a cow on the right shoulder. #AuroraOPP are on scene and diverting it to a side road off the highway."

OPP said the cow was last seen heading towards the Innisfil area, and South Simcoe Police were called to help capture the animal.

The cow's eventual fate on Thursday was unknown, but there were no injuries reported to humans or bovines.

An Australian snake catcher called to remove a large python from a resident's bedroom ended up rounding up a massive spider in the same room.

Stuart McKenzie of Sunshine Coast Snake Catchers 24/7 was called out to a Queensland home on a report of a large snake in a resident's bedroom.

A video shared by the snake catching business shows McKenzie enter the room to discover a gigantic huntsman spider on the wall above the head of the bed.

"A SPIDER and a SNAKE in the same bedroom," the post said. "This is what some people's nightmares are made of."

McKenzie said it was one of the largest huntsman spiders he had ever seen.

The video shows McKenzie using a hook to wrangle the snake, a carpet python, before using his hat to catch the spider.

The spider was released outside the home, and the snake was taken to a nearby wooded area.

Stuart McKenzie of Sunshine Coast Snake Catchers in Australia has removed venomous serpents — and the occasional plastic toy — from inside and outside Queensland homes, but despite a lifelong love of reptiles, he said the career path came about unexpectedly.

McKenzie, whose popular social media videos led to he and his team starring in National Geographic Australia series Aussie Snake Wranglers, said his love of reptiles began when he was a child and had lizards as pets "rather than the standard dog or cat."

"I had a couple of lizards. One of them is still alive, it's like 28 years old," McKenzie told UPI in a Zoom interview.

McKenzie's love of animals led to his studying zoology and marine biology at the University of Townsville.

"I didn't really think I was going to get into snake catching at that time," McKenzie said.

He said it was during his seven-year tenure working at the Australia Zoo in Beerwah, Queensland, that he started a snake catching business, which he said started as a "side gig" but evolved into a full-time job when he discovered the "niche market" for reptile removal services.

McKenzie and his team of about five full-time employees at Sunshine Coast Snake Catchers now travel around the region every day to relocate snakes from inside and outside of people's homes.

The team posts videos of their rescues to social media, where they frequently go viral. One recent video that proved popular on Facebook involved the team removing a red-bellied black snake that was discovered inside a moving car when it slithered across the occupants' feet. "That was pretty crazy, that's the first time that's happened in several years," he said of the hitchhiking serpent.

He said it's far more common for snakes to turn up inside homes.

"I've caught them inside ovens, tucked up inside fridges, I've caught them under beds — even under someone's pillow, or tucked in behind the pillows," he said. "You could walk around your house and point at any object or any area of your house and I've probably caught a snake there."

Authorities in California said an attempt to retrieve a pair of dropped sunglasses from a campground toilet led to a man having to be rescued from the sewage tank.

The Fresno County Sheriff's Office said deputies responded Saturday alongside Cal Fire personnel when a man was reported to be trapped in the holding tank of a toilet vault at Camp Edison in Shaver Lake.

"This is a facility with no plumbing, so it essentially operates like a porta potty," the sheriff's office said on social media.

The rescuers learned the man had attempted to reach into the toilet to retrieve a pair of dropped sunglasses and ended up falling in.

"After spending close to 15 minutes in the tank, deputies and firefighters were able to pull the man out to safety. Due to his exposure to urine, fecal matter and chemicals, he was put through a decontamination process," the post said.

The man, who was "otherwise unharmed," was able to walk away without further medical attention.

"As for safety tips, never try and reach inside a tank of a vault toilet," officials wrote. "If you drop something inside, consider it a loss. Always secure or remove valuables (phone, wallet, jewelry, etc.) before getting close to the hole of one of these toilets."
