Elsewhere SF unearthed statue is a mystery

A San Francisco man doing landscaping work in his yard unearthed a 150-pound stone statue that might have ties to a famous local artist.

Greg Gatwood said he was working in his yard in the Russian Hill neighborhood when he came across a stone slab buried under the grass.

"I was doing a little grading and I came across what I thought was a piece of concrete, rectangular, and I thought, I'll just pop it out and throw it to the side," Gatwood told KTVU-TV.

Gatwood dug out the heavy slab and turned it over, revealing a sculpture with an intricately detailed face carved into the stone.

Judy Gittelsohn, an artist and Gatwood's partner, consulted with other artists and began to suspect the 2-foot-wide sculpture might be the work of Ralph Stackpole, a prominent San Francisco artist who died in 1973.

Bruce Marwick, a member of the Sacramento Art Deco Society, said determining the artist behind the sculpture would be a difficult endeavor.

"It's going out on a limb to call this a Ralph Stackpole piece," Marwick told the San Francisco Chronicle. "It's a wonderfully interesting piece, but the hardest thing to do in art evaluation is to authenticate a piece without a signature or historical documentation."

Gittelsohn said the Stackpole influence on the sculpture seems clear, but she agreed it might be unlikely to be the artist's work.

"Probably it was one of his students," she said.

Fire in the hills

The Gann Fire raging east of Stockton has reached 9,363 acres..

The fire has forced evacuation for 1,473 residents, according to a press release from Gov. Gavin Newsom's office. Another 1,400 are under evacuation warnings.

Fire crews have contained only 10 percent of the blaze, which ignited near Hogan Dam Road and Gann Road in Calaveras County on Monday evening.

Over 1,500 personnel are fighting the fire with helicopters, engines and dozers, according to Ricardo Coronado, a Cal Fire spokesperson. Coronado described the terrain as "steep and rugged," surrounded by brush and woodlands, making it difficult to contain the fire.

"Aerial resources are very vital when it comes to responding to these fire incidents," Coronado said.

Coronado said he believes more resources should be coming in from across the state as fire continues spreading northeast, with smoke

Chaos at Woodward Reservoir: Shots Fired During Massive Brawl, Suspect Arrested After Manhunt

What began as a peaceful Saturday evening at Woodward Reservoir quickly descended into terror after a physical fight escalated into a gunfire panic, leaving two men hospitalized and sparking a multi-agency search for the gunman.

Panic at the Park

On Saturday, August 1, at approximately 7:20 p.m., Stanislaus County Sheriff's deputies rushed to 14528 26 Mile Rd. in Oakdale following reports of a violent brawl involving several individuals.

While deputies were en route, dispatch broadcasted alarming updates:

An involved party had pulled a firearm and was actively shooting into the crowd.

Multiple people were hit, while panicked bystanders threw themselves to the ground, desperately seeking cover from the gunfire.

When law enforcement arrived, they discovered two male victims suffering from gunshot wounds—a 36-year-old and a 31-year-old.

Deputies immediately rendered emergency medical aid before both victims were rushed to a local hospital—one via Medi-flight helicopter and the other by ground ambulance. Both men were reported to be in stable condition shortly after arrival.

The Getaway & The Manhunt

Witnesses informed investigators that the shooter had fled the scene in a van alongside two other passengers.

Deputies quickly spotted a vehicle matching the getaway description and executed a traffic stop. Inside, they detained a Hispanic adult female and a Hispanic juvenile female. Both were questioned and subsequently released. However, the primary suspect was nowhere to be found inside the vehicle.

The breakthrough came shortly after, when alert observers notified deputies of a man acting suspiciously near the reservoir's main boat ramp area, actively ducking and hiding whenever law enforcement passed by.

SUSPECT PROFILE

Name: Jorge Jimenez

Age: 45

Residence: Oakland, CA

Status: Booked into Stanislaus County Public Safety Center

Charges: 2 Counts of Assault with a Deadly Weapon

Deputies swarmed the boat ramp, took Jimenez into custody without further incident, and recovered a firearm at the scene.

Multi-Agency Coordination & Next Steps

The Stanislaus County Sheriff's Office extended its gratitude to the Oakdale Police Department, CHP - Modesto, and the Modesto Police Department's Air Unit for their rapid response

tions” is a word of encouragement

that we all enjoy hearing. Being recognized for any of our accomplishments means that someone has noticed what we have done. It usually brings us feelings of worth and value, importance and significance. Often we swell with pride saying, “Look at me! I’m someone special.”

When things had finally stabilized in David’s life he paused briefly and rejoiced by saying, “He put a new song in my heart.” This was not the first time that God heard and answered his prayers. God had delivered him many times - perhaps more times than he could ever remember. And this may not necessarily have been a new song. It could have been one that he sang many times before. Thanksgiving and praise were a central part of his life. Recognizing God’s goodness is a predominant theme in the Psalms. But “a new song in his mouth, a new hymn of praise.” What could this possibly mean?

All too often we take God’s goodness for granted. We expect His deliverance from “messy” situations. We expect Him to heal us when we are sick, we expect Him to provide for our financial needs, we expect Him to be with us when we travel. And He is. And He does guide and guard us and give us what we need. And we express our thanks. Usually. But every time God does protect us and provide for our needs are a new act of deliverance. Each day is a new day and each gift a new gift because we have never been where we are today. It’s all new!

Often we deceive ourselves without realizing it. Our hearts can be deeply moved when we learn of an urgent need to do something special for our Lord. We gladly give - sometimes to the point when we ourselves have to do without. That is God-honoring and will not go unnoticed by Him. We tend to take great satisfaction when He honors us when we honor Him.

And no doubt there have been times when we have done this and God has blessed us in ways that we never thought possible. Again, it is His way of blessing us for blessing Him. And heaven rejoices.

But David reminds us that there is something more that God wants from us than any gift we could give Him. In fact, he says that “sacrifices and offerings,” even “burnt offerings and sin offerings you did not require.” What is it, then that you want from me God?

After a moment’s thought he said, “Then / realized,” what You want. ME! “Here I am, I have come back and desire to do your will, O my God, Your law is within my heart.” He could not get away from God’s law that was written in his heart. God’s word convicted Him.

Now David realized that none of his possessions made any difference to God. Nothing he had given or could give to God was of any significance - now or in the future. God wanted him completely to Himself to do whatever He, his Master, had for him to do. David, the Lord’s anointed, finally presented himself in complete dedication to his God.

Aaron hosts inspiring baseball camp

For 232 young baseball players from the Bronx, August was a month to remember.

The Aaron Judge ALL RISE Foundation, in partnership with the MLB Players Association and Major League Baseball, hosted a private, free Baseball ProCamp at Fordham University, giving local Little League players the opportunity to learn, play, and spend time with New York Yankees Captain Aaron Judge.

The camp was made possible through a grant from the MLB-MLBPA Youth Development Foundation, with ALL RISE working closely with Little League International, GSE Worldwide, and ProCamps.

With the support of Little League Urban Initiative, which helped coordinate participation across the Bronx, the camp brought together players from nine Bronx Little League programs: South Riverdale, Van Nest, Pelham Parkway, Pelham Bay, Parkchester, Jaws and Taino, Co-Op City, City Island, and Castle Hill. Ten students from The Brotherhood Sister Sol organization also participated.

Aaron Judge and former New York Yankee Tyler Wade worked alongside the young athletes throughout the day, leading drills, playing games, racing by age group, and sharing lessons from their own experiences in baseball. When asked about the most important fundamentals he learned at a young age, Judge told the players, “It’s important to hustle, but the most important is to be a good teammate.” Each team also had the opportunity to take a photo with Judge.

In addition to the clinic, ALL RISE donated $9,999.99 to Bronx Little League programs to purchase baseballs, bats, and other equipment. The donation carries special significance in the Bronx, where there are 99 Little League teams—the same number Aaron Judge proudly wears as the Yankees’ Captain. Each participant received swag bags featuring baseball merchandise and memorabilia donated by DICK’S Sporting Goods, Fanatics, the MLB Players Association, Conagra Brands/David Seeds, Big League Chew, Topps, Rawlings, Jordan Brand, ALL RISE and ProCamps.

For the young athletes, it was an exciting opportunity to learn from a role model and be reminded that they can reach their unlimited possibilities.

Supes prepare for mussel invasion

The San Joaquin County Board of Supervisors is maintaining pressure to stop the spread of invasive golden mussels and protect the Delta. At its August 4 meeting, the Board voted to extend the local emergency proclamation, reaffirming its commitment to addressing the growing threat. “Battling the golden mussel infestation requires long-term commitment, resources, and cooperation across agencies and organizations,” said District Two Supervisor Paul Canepa. “We won’t stop working to protect the Delta and our communities.” Golden mussels are an invasive, non-native species that can rapidly accumulate on and clog critical water infrastructure, threatening the systems that support San Joaquin County’s agriculture, industry, and communities. Two-thirds of the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta lies within San Joaquin County, providing drinking water, agricultural irrigation, flood protection, recreation, and economic benefits. “This is not the time to take our foot off the gas,” said District One Supervisor Mario Gardea. “We’re working closely with our regional partners to secure funding, coordinate our response, and protect our waterways.” The Board first proclaimed a local emergency in April 28 which activated the Office of Emergency Services to monitor impacts on local waterways, coordinate response efforts, and advocate for State and federal assistance. The proclamation was extended on June 16. Since then, Supervisors Gardea and Canepa have continued to elevate the issue by convening an Ad Hoc Golden Mussel Committee that includes the Port of Stockton, San Joaquin Area Flood Control Agency, San Joaquin Delta Neighborhood Watch, the San Joaquin Farm Bureau, among others. In September, Supervisors Canepa and Gardea will lead (See page 5—Mussel) settling near Valley Springs and Copperopolis in the Sierra Nevada foothills.

An evacuation shelter has been opened at Valley Springs Veterans Memorial. This shelter accepts small animals, with another animal shelter at the Calaveras County Fairgrounds.

Schools across the Calaveras Unified School District are closed Wednesday, according to the district's Facebook page. This closure comes less than a week after schools opened for the 2026-27 school year.

"Based on current air quality conditions, the ongoing impacts of wildfire smoke, and the potential for conditions to change rapidly as winds shift, we believe closing all schools is the safest course of action," wrote Kassie Meeks, Calaveras Unified School District superintendent.

Newsom announced that California secured a Fire Management Assistance Grant from FEMA to mobilize additional resources for the fire.

That same day, California deployed personnel to support ongoing firefighting efforts in both Oregon and Washington.

The Fire Management Assistance Grant allows local, state and tribal agencies responding to major disasters to apply for a 75% reimbursement of fire suppression costs — including field camps, tools, equipment use and other supplies. According to the California Office of Emergency Services, this is California's third grant in 2026.

Coronado said that there have not been any injuries reported and that a team has been ordered to go out and assess areas for potential building damage. He also urged those impacted by the fire to continue checking the Calaveras County Sheriff's social media accounts for the latest information.

Herbert Wayne Smith, 65, was arrested Monday evening near the fire's reported point of origin along Hogan Dam Road, according to Calaveras County booking records. He was booked on suspicion of unlawfully causing a fire that burned structures or forest land and bonded out Tuesday evening, according to jail officials.

Smith told a local Tv station: "This is going to destroy my life one way or another. I can't go back in time.

"I am sorry to everyone out there. I did not intend this to happen. That was never my intent Tight lines ...

Near the southern flank of Mount Shasta, springs and snow-melt converge to form the McCloud River. This Sacramento River tributary, held sacred by the Winnemem Wintu tribe, teemed with Chinook salmon “The winter run was the main sustenance source for the Winnemem Wintu throughout history,” said tribal member Gary Mulcahy. “We consider them the grandfather of all salmon.”

For several years, Winnemem Wintu leaders have collaborated with state and federal officials to reintroduce the critically endangered fish to this wilderness waterway in a historic effort to revitalize the McCloud and reconnect with their past. But a federal proposal to increase the height of Shasta Dam by more than 18 feet to provide more water to farmers now threatens the tribe's land and could harm salmon runs. Contemplated for decades and gaining traction among Republican lawmakers, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation's proposed Shasta Dam and Reservoir Enlargement Project would boost the capacity of California's largest reservoir.

Since President Donald Trump took office for his second term, the federal government has not mounted any public effort to raise the dam. But Trump has taken several steps in that direction, including signing executive orders instructing federal officials to waive environmental rules and deliver more water to California growers.

Recently, the dam project appeared to get a push in the House Natural Resources Committee's budget reconciliation bill, with a designation of $2 billion “for construction and associated activities that increase the capacity of existing Bureau of Reclamation surface water storage facilities.” Though the budget language does not name Shasta Dam, experts say it's precisely crafted to facilitate the project.

“There's no mystery here,” said Barry Nelson, policy advisor with the Golden State Salmon Association. “That language is designed to push the Shasta raise.”

Raising the dam was the “number-one priority” water project for the first Trump administration, Nelson said.

However, U.S. Rep. Doug LaMalfa, a Republican whose district includes Shasta and who helped draft the budget language, told CalMatters that while he endorses enlarging Shasta Dam, the reconciliation bill's “funding is not for any specific project.” Last year, a bill that would have allocated funds for enlarging the dam while prohibiting state laws from obstructing the project died in the House. It was sponsored by 12 California Republicans, including LaMalfa.

The Bureau of Reclamation estimated in 2014 that enlarging Shasta Dam would cost $1.4 billion — roughly $1.8 billion in today's dollars. Obtaining the array of state and federal permits for the dam could take years, and is likely to face court challenges.

The project would provide an additional 51,300 acre-feet of water per year to recipients — mainly farmers — of the Central Valley Project and the State Water Project, according to a federal estimate. That would increase the amount they receive on average by less than 1% , which Ron Stork, a policy expert with the group Friends of the River, referred to as “decimal dust.” The dam project would claim some of the Winnemem Wintu's last remaining territory and could violate the state's Wild and Scenic Rivers Act, which explicitly prohibits constructing reservoirs on the McCloud's final miles before entering Lake Shasta. State officials have publicly opposed the project in the past. In 2013, the California Department of Fish and Wildlife said raising the dam would have “significant and unavoidable impacts” on the Sacramento River ecosystem. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has similarly warned federal officials that the project would restrict high-water flows and reduce fish habitat.

State officials declined to comment for this story. Bureau of Reclamation spokesperson Peter Soeth also declined to comment. Stork, a longtime opponent of the dam raise, said the Trump administration is liable to ignore the state law. Trump's January executive order directed federal officials to deliver more water through the Central Valley Project “by increasing storage and conveyance ... notwithstanding any contrary State or local laws.”“We certainly expect some serious mischief here,” Stork said. “The president's executive order more or less says, ‘Please find ways to accomplish my agenda by trying to get around state and federal law.’”

Mulcahy, the Winnemem Wintu's government liaison, said Lake Shasta flooded 90% of his tribe's historical territory. “Village sites, sacred sites, cultural gathering sites,” he said.

Increasing the dam's height will do even more damage, he said, periodically inundating many important gathering places, including the Kabyai Creek burial ground, where dozens of tribal members were laid to rest after a vicious 1854 massacre by white settlers.

It would also flood a cleansing pool for Winnemem men, a riverside dancing mesa and a young women's coming-of-age ceremony site called Puberty Rock. This, Mulcahy said, will fray some of the last remaining cultural threads holding together the tribe, which he said consists of about 140 members.

“We wouldn't be able to hold the ceremonies that are necessary to fulfill our spiritual and cultural needs,” he said.

The Winnemem Wintu are not included on the official list of federally recognized tribes, which could limit their influence over the project.

Polarizing farmers and environmentalists

Like many Delta and Central Valley water supply projects, the Shasta Dam raise has polarized farmers and environmentalists in a dispute over how it would affect Chinook salmon. Environmentalists and fishery advocates say it will imperil already declining salmon populations, while project proponents, including the Westlands Water District, say it will help the ecosystem.

MORE ABOUT: Fishing

Westlands provides water, imported mostly from the Delta, to San Joaquin Valley farmers who grow 150,000 acres of pistachios and almonds — their main crops — as well as other fruits, grains and vegetables.

But General Manager Allison Febbo said the Shasta project isn’t directly about water supply. Rather, she said, it’s meant to help fish. Febbo explained that increasing the reservoir’s volume will keep its water colder, which is essential for spawning.

If the plight of the fish improves, Febbo said, regulations on water diversions might be eased — which would amount to an indirect benefit to water users like Westlands.

“We keep getting ratcheted down as the species continues to decline, so our water supply isn’t going to get any better until the species gets better,” Febbo said.

LaMalfa also stressed that the project would be “a win-win” by increasing water storage and better insulating the reservoir’s cold-water pool.

“More water for people and more cold water for salmon,” the congressman said.

But Nelson, at the Golden State Salmon Association, said Shasta Dam has already “been absolutely catastrophic for salmon.”

“The idea that a Shasta raise would benefit salmon — particularly under this set of federal agencies — is absurd,” he said.

Completed in 1945, the dam blocked Chinook from reaching hundreds of miles of stream habitat. For the winter-run Chinook — whose unique life cycle involves residing and spawning in freshwater through summer — the ice-cold McCloud was their stronghold.

“It can be 110 degrees in the canyon there, and you can be standing in the river in waders and your legs are so cold it hurts,” said Rene Henery, California science director with the group Trout Unlimited, as he explained the importance of the McCloud to the future survival of winter-run Chinook.

Today, the fish — which enter freshwater in the winter — cling to existence in a short stretch of river downstream of Lake Shasta, surviving thanks to the release of cold water stored deep in the reservoir. However, this resource frequently runs out in the summer as the fish lay and fertilize their eggs, which can lead to complete spawning failures in lethally warm water.

“Dams don’t make water, so in a low-water year, raising the dam does nothing,” he said.

In wet years, he added, the enlarged dam will harm fish by capturing water that would otherwise flood vital wetland habitat downstream, like the recently restored Yolo Bypass, west of Sacramento. “The inundation we get on the Yolo Bypass is what’s keeping salmon populations hanging on in the Sacramento,” Henery said.

Jon Rosenfield, science director at the advocacy group San Francisco Baykeeper, added that “expanding the dam will capture more of the high flows (during wet years) that are now the only lifeline those fish have.”

LEGAL NOTICE

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SAN JOAQUIN, 217 W. Elm St., Lodi CA 95240
BRANCH NAME: Lodi
ESTATE OF: OF Justin Michael Martinez
NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF Justin Michael Martinez
CASE NUMBER: STK-PR-EST-2026-888
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of Justin Michael Martinez
A Petition for Probate has been filed by: Maria D. Martinez in the Superior Court of California, County of San Joaquin.
The Petition for Probate requests : Maria D. Martinez be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval, Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.)
The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows: Date: Aug. 6, 2026 Time: 8:30 a.m. 217 W. Elm Street (2nd Floor), Lodi, CA 95240
If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
Attorney for petitioner: Karen J. Calderon, Law Office of Hastings & Ron, 1330 W. Fremont St., STE 1, Stockton, CA 95203

NOTICE! You have been sued. The court may decide against you without your being heard unless you respond within 30 days. Read the information below.
You have 30 CALENDAR DAYS after this summons and legal papers are served on you to file a written response at this court and have a copy served on the plaintiff. A letter or phone call will not protect you. Your written response must be in proper legal form if you want the court to hear your case. There may be a court form that you can use for your response. You can find these court forms and more information at the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp), your county law library, or the courthouse nearest you. If you cannot pay the filing fee, ask the court clerk for a fee waiver form. If you do not file your response on time, you may lose the case by default, and your wages, money, and property may be taken without further warning from the court.
There are other legal requirements. You may want to call an attorney right away. If you do not know an attorney, you may want to call an attorney referral service. If you cannot afford an attorney, you may be eligible for free legal services from a nonprofit legal services program. You can locate these nonprofit groups at the California Legal Services Web site (www.lawhelpcalifornia.org), the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp), or by contacting your local court or county bar association. NOTE: The court has a statutory lien for waived fees and costs an any settlement or arbitration award of $10,000 or more In a civil case. The court's lien must be paid before the court will dismiss the case as the person sued under the fictitious name of (specify):
¡AVISO! Lo han demandado. Si no responde dentro de 30 días, la corte puede decidir en su contra sin escuchar su versión. Lea la información a continuación.
Tiene 30 DÍAS DE CALENDARIO después de que le entreguen esta citación y papeles legales para presentar una respuesta por escrito en esta corte y hacer que se entregue una copia al demandante. Una carta o una llamada telefónica no lo protegen. Su respuesta por escrito tiene que estar en formato legal correcto si desea que procesen su caso en la corte. Es posible que haya un formulario que usted pueda usar para su respuesta. Puede encontrar estos formularios de la corte y más información en el Centro de Ayuda de las Cortes de California (www.sucorte.ca.gov), en la biblioteca de leyes de su condado o en la corte que le quede más cerca. Si no puede pagar la cuota de presentación, pida al secretario de la corte que le dé un formulario de exención de pago de cuotas. Si no presenta su respuesta a tiempo, puede perder el caso por incumplimiento y la corte le podrá quitar su sueldo, dinero y bienes sin más advertencia.
Hay otros requisitos legales. Es recomendable que llame a un abogado inmediatamente. Si no conoce a un abogado, puede llamar a un servicio de remisión a abogados. Si no puede pagar a un abogado, es posible que cumpla con los requisitos para obtener servicios legales gratuitos de un programa de servicios legales sin fines de lucro. Puede encontrar estos grupos sin fines de lucro en el sitio web de California Legal Services, (www.lawhelpcalifornia.org), en el Centro de Ayuda de las Cortes de California, (www.sucorte.ca.gov) o poniéndose en contacto con la corte o el colegio de abogados locales. AVISO: Por ley, la corte tiene derecho a reclamar las cuotas y los costos exentos por imponer un gravamen sobre cualquier recuperación de $10,000 ó más de valor recibida mediante un acuerdo o una concesión de arbitraje en un caso de derecho civil. Tiene que pagar el gravamen de la corte antes de que la corte pueda desechar el caso.

You have 30 CALENDAR DAYS after this summons and legal papers are served on you to file a written response at this court and have a copy served on the plaintiff. A letter or phone call will not protect you. Your written response must be in proper legal form if you want the court to hear your case. There may be a court form that you can use for your response. You can find these court forms and more information at the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp), your county law library, or the courthouse nearest you. If you cannot pay the filing fee, ask the court clerk for a fee waiver form. If you do not file your response on time, you may lose the case by default, and your wages, money, and property may be taken without further warning from the court.
There are other legal requirements. You may want to call an attorney right away. If you do not know an attorney, you may want to call an attorney referral service. If you cannot afford an attorney, you may be eligible for free legal services from a nonprofit legal services program. You can locate these nonprofit groups at the California Legal Services Web site (www.lawhelpcalifornia.org), the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp), or by contacting your local court or county bar association. NOTE: The court has a statutory lien for waived fees and costs on any settlement or arbitration award of $10,000 or more in a civil case. The court's lien must be paid before the court will dismiss the case.

Honker hailing hero

A Texas family's pet goose is being hailed as a hero for alerting the sleeping family to a fire that erupted in their barn.

The family's home security cameras recorded as Goosey let out several loud honks while flames erupted in the barn behind the home.

"I just casually came outside and I saw a fire billowing out of there," Gerber told KHOU-TV. "I grabbed a water hose and ran over there."

Gerber was able to extinguish the flames and the animals inside the barn were able to escape unharmed.

Fort Bend County resident Bert Gerber said he was asleep in front of the TV last week when he was roused by the honking of the family's pet goose, Goosey.

Gerber and his wife, Chelsea, said the incident could have turned tragic if not for Goosey's vigilance.

"We are still in complete shock over how differently this could have ended," Chelsea Gerber wrote on social media. "We are beyond grateful everyone is safe, and we couldn't be more proud of Goosey. He truly is our little hero."

Goosey came to live with the family in May at the urging of the Gerbers' young daughter, Elaine.

Gridiron helmet housed horned viper

A high school football player in Arkansas noticed something unusual about his helmet and brought it to coaches who discovered a venomous snake hiding under the padding.

Maumelle High School Athletic Director Kirk Horton said the player noticed unusual movement inside his helmet after warmups at a recent practice and brought it to a defensive coach.

Horton and the coaches looked under the helmet's padding and discovered an approximately 2-foot-long snake that turned out to be a venomous cottonmouth.

"It really was just shock and disbelief," Horton told KARK-TV. "I've got a better shot at winning the lottery than seeing this in my ten years."

The coaches placed the helmet into a bag and contacted Maumelle Animal Services.

Officers relocated the snake to a wooded area away from the school.

The football player was not bitten by the snake and was able to continue practice with a replacement helmet.

"Before putting on your helmet, shoes, gloves or any outdoor gear, always give it a quick check first," the Maumelle Animal Shelter said on social media. "It only takes a few seconds and could prevent a very scary encounter -- or worse."

Guinness world record for shipwrecked oldest beer?

A diver who found a 162-year-old bottle of Guinness in a shipwreck off the coast of England contacted scientists who might be able to recreate the 1864 version of the stout.

Stefan Panis, an underwater photographer from Belgium, was exploring a shipwreck off the coast of Dover last year when he surfaced with an intact bottle of liquid.

A diver who found a 162-year-old bottle of Guinness in a shipwreck off the coast of England contacted scientists who might be able to recreate the 1864 version of the stout.

Stefan Panis, an underwater photographer from Belgium, was exploring a shipwreck off the coast of Dover last year when he surfaced with an intact bottle of liquid.

Scientists at KU Leuven University in Belgium are now looking into whether they can recreate the 162-year-old version of the beer.

"There is always a chance that we can recover the complete DNA, and then we can do a small re-brew of the exact beer that was found in the 1860s," Panis told the BBC.

He said the stout inside the bottle may even still be drinkable. Brewing historian Edward Bourke told him the bottle being stored upside-down may have prevented any seawater from entering.

Bourke explained the air bubbles caused when the bottle is upside down creates a pressurized seal.

"There is a possibility that it's still drinkable," Panis said. "The question is if the sea water has come into the bottles through the corks. If not, most likely the beer would still be drinkable."

Panis, who admitted he is not a big fan of Guinness, said he would be willing to sample the aged brew if it is found to be drinkable.

The discovery was celebrated by Diageo, the company that owns the Guinness brand.

"Discoveries like this provide a fascinating window into our past and help build a deeper understanding of our heritage," a spokesperson said. "Currently, our Guinness Archive team is liaising with the divers to gather more information and evaluate the find."

Someone's fake cats may discourage owls making homes

Mysterious fake cats have been placed in a pair of vacant lots in Cape Coral, Fla., in what wildlife experts believe might be an attempt to ward off burrowing owls.

Residents living near an empty lot along Southwest 25th Place in Cape Coral said six of the two-dimensional feline effigies were mysteriously placed in the grass near a known burrowing owl nest on the property.

Cape Coral Friends of Wildlife volunteers discovered a similar scene at a nearby lot near the corner of Southwest 20th Avenue and Southwest 30th Street, but no burrowing owl nests were identified on the property.

A CCFW volunteer contacted the City of Cape Coral's development services and was told an environmental consultant recently determined the burrow at the Southwest 25th Place lot was abandoned.

The lots had recently been sold, and CCFW volunteers theorized the fake cats might be an attempt to prevent more burrowing owls from moving into the properties before they can be developed.

Burrowing owls are protected by the federal Migratory Bird Treaty Act, and they are classified as threatened by the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission, making their burrows illegal to disturb without special permits.

"After talking to the neighbors, it looks like the lot was up for sale and the signs gone. So, I guess it's been purchased, and somebody decided to go to the extreme to protect their lot," CCFW volunteer Dawn Cardascia told WBBH-TV.

Feral and domesticated cats are among the main predators of burrowing owls in Florida.

"Please help our burrowing owls and the other birds of Cape Coral by keeping your cat indoors," the CCFW says on its website.

Lawmen lasso loose lizard

An Asian water monitor lizard was safely reunited with its owner after nearly a month on the loose in a Tennessee neighborhood.

Bedford County Animal Control captured the large lizard Friday on Spring Street in Wartrace and posted a photo to social media in the hopes of finding the reptile's owner.

The Bedford County Sheriff's Office said the owner was identified and safely reunited with the pet.
